our journalistic Mayor, Mr. Hall:
Mr. Lex Africanus is never satisfied.
Few people ever are. He, the incontrovertible bore, says, "Why make a humbug Few people ever are. He, the incontrovertible bore, says, "Why make a humbug of journalism by saying one time it is a profession, then a science, then a trade?" It whom we say, with staggered confidence, knowing that we have one; been feeling of the subject of journalism, and perhaps not always correctly interpreting 14, journalism is many-sided, many-huid, and from here Braddock's regiments 1754, and from here Braddock's regiments perhaps not always correctly interpreting it, journalism is many-sided, many-hud, a perfect kaleidoscope, yet underneath all its mists and lightning flashes and opaque mysteries, a harmonious and well-disci-plined affair. The answer that Lex Africanus, despizing everything but yellow paper and a quill, makes, is that journalism is a personal business. We know it is. We have known book-ksepers of chemical warehouses, and tellers in banks, and treasurers of law courts. Yet is chemistry to vote, and was about to ascend the trembling stairway, the crowd, which had treasurers of law courts. Yet is chemistry gathered to witness the election, ran with not a science, and banking a science, and gathered to witness the election, ran with the loss of so much associated with the sence. The readers of the paper will buy the paper as usual because they are radicals and the paper is the Tribuns. But if it were to be said to morrow that Horace (Tribuns of the Case) as would have been far greater than the loss of so much associated with the loss of so much associated with the loss of the critizers. it were to be said to morrow that Horace Greeley were dead, what a commotion there would be in the Tribune office. The stockholders would begin to inquire whether Mr. Smalley were capable of supplying his own place and Mr. Greeley's also. They would have some doubts of it. Ripley might still write, and Hazzard, and Winter and Hay; but the Vanderbut of the Tribunes ascepton would arbilt of the Tribune association would It was so with the Times. That paper, like the Tribune, filled a place made for it by Mr. Raymond. The moment he died like the Trivine, filled a place made for it by Mr. Raymond. The mement he died the man who knew the trade, the current, the coast, the harbors for which the Times was built was nowhere to be found. To change its spars and remodel its rigging was one thing, but Mr. Bigelow was not the man to know whether the paper could sail in a quarter-wind with skysails. Mr. Raymond could no longer put his journalistic and political character into the Times We will deavend remotation for the woods to the residence of A. Garrington with all its contents. Mr. Gorringer had a very narrow escape. He got his family istic and political character into the Mr. Greeke We will admit that Mr. Bigelow had a well deserved reputation for success in literature, and to a certain degree, in a sphere in politics. But any aptness of his for literature and politics was not of a journalistic kind. The first leader he wrote for the Times showed that his estimate of journalism was the groundwork of his failure. He moralized well enough, but his moralizing showed that he estimated the toation very much as J. S. C. in a lot of hav, twenty hadden of notation.

but his moralizing showed that be estimated the position very much as J. S. C. Abbott would estimate that of a commander-in-chief—without the practical ability to fill it. Mr. Lex Africanus will say that Mr. Raymond being gone, it most possible, and perhaps not desirable, to put in his place a man every way his equal in his conception of politics and his advortness in journalistic discussion. Yes, but any architect will tell you that it is wrong to put gothic windows on an Italian vills. any architect will tell you that it is wreng!

Losing Mr. Raymond's character, the Losing Mr. Raymond's character, the Times could not succeed with a lesser man in journalism. Mr. Bigelow was in nowise his equal.

In the same spirit which dictated the employment of Mr. Bigelow, some of the quidcunes have been, prophecying that, should Mr. Greeley go where all men who call their brethren hars are in danger of going, Mr. Colfax would be his legitimate successor. That is an error. Mr. Coltax At Hickory Run the loss is severe, the going, Mr. Colfax would be his legitimate successor. That is an error. Mr. Colfax At Hickory Run the loss is severe, the se a genial, pleasant man, who understands something of politics, and who has edited a Western newspaper. But Mr. Colfax's reputation for access in journalism ought on Monday night and put the fire out, or reputation for access in journalism ought to would be impossible to say what the not to be established upon Mr. Colfax were established in the Tribuns office (Mr. Greeley having taken onto humself a white coat), the first thing readers would be the country.

Mark Twater on Character

Mark Twatn on Chamber miss would be the telling words compactly set in the column. Mr. Colfax is not a Against all chambermaids, of whatere great writer. If you pull your trunk out six inches from the well, so that the lid will stay up when you open it, they always shove that trunk back again. They do it on purpose.

They always put your other boots into inaccessible places. They chiefly enjoy depositing them as far under the bed as the wall will permit. It is because this compared went onet down in undismifed attithe bed. unless one were daily concerned with picking out the writers by name he would hardly be able to say that Mr. Huriburt wrote such an article, or. Mr. Marble the leader. The London Times, the Pall Mall Gazette and other great papers have been conducted on the same plan. What is good in such may stand for what it is good in such may stand for what it is worth; but the writer is unknown.

We have come, indeed, to believe in personal journalism only where the personal journalism only where the personality is concealed. Carlilean, heroes may work behind the newspaper, as well as behind the throne. But such heroes put on bind the throne. But such heroes put on wardrobe was in the morning. And when the concealment. When a ottizen

SUCKER-ROD JOINTS. Explanation of Cuts.

No 1— represents the Joint complete. No. 2—A longitudinal sectional view of a full Joint, showing, the position of the wood in the socket when wedged a glance at which must convince the most skeptical of the superiority of this Joint over any other. No. 3—A rive of the end of the Bod, when surned ready for the Bocket to be driven on, with the slot for the wedge and the wedge about being entered No. 4—Represents the end of the wood, and shows the proper way to saw the slot (across the grain) into which the wedge is to be driven. The above description and accompanying ents, will enable any skulled person to make connection at the wells in a much shorter time thin can be done with any other field, all the, tools required being a small fine saw, one of our hollow argers and a few of our wedges. The wedger can be procured at any hardware store, gratas. FURNITURE Bedstends, Bureaus, Tables, &c. ERICK: RRICK:
